INTRODUCTION

Beyond Borders is a Scottish initiative dedicated to facilitating small nation dialogue and cultural exchange by using Scotland’s own heritage.

Beyond Borders works across several mediums – literature, dialogue, law, film, politics, visual arts and music. Throughout August 2011, we are running a series of exhibitions, film screenings, literature discussions and political debates that explore some of the most urgent political and cultural topics of our time.

I invite you to take a look at our programme of events in Edinburgh and at Traquair House in the Scottish Borders and to travel beyond borders to new worlds here in Scotland.

A debate on how the power of art and satire is being used to express protest and foster revolution, at the Assembly Rooms. assemblyfestival.com

The Art of Resistance: from Belarus to Egypt
Tuesday 23rd August 10.30am
[ Location ONE, Assembly Rooms ]

Art and resistance go hand in hand; as Kurdish writer Yaşar Kemal has said, “Art is a rebellion. Art warns people against lies, oppression, meaningless never-ending wars and all forms of evil.”

The Arab Spring of 2011 deployed art in its most political and courageous form – expressed in the cartoons that adorn Benghazi, or by Egyptian singer Ramy Essam, ‘the Billy Bragg of Tahrir Square’, whose song ‘Irhal’ (‘Leave’) became the anthem of the revolt. This is equally expressed in the resistance of Belarus’ people – who live within the last dictatorship in Europe – spearheaded by the underground Belarus Free Theatre, whose secret performances risked arrest and persecution.

Beyond Borders Dialogue Initiative

The Dialogue Initiative seeks to utilize its cultural projects and the relationships they create to promote small nation dialogue, and to foster peace and democratic reform around the world.

In particular, the Initiative draws upon Scotland’s unique political settlement and cultural heritage, including the stunning beauty of Traquair House and the Scottish Borders, to host, foster and facilitate exchanges between key political, diplomatic, academic and civil society actors from countries that are engulfed in or emerging from conflict. Over the course of each year the Initiative hosts a number of international political and legal visits to Scotland and organises both open and confidential conferences, workshops, seminars, and lectures for Beyond Borders and a range of international organisations such as JSMT, British Council, Centre for Humanitarian Dialogue, Bar Human Rights Committee, the Democratic Progress Institute, Intermediate and many more. The Dialogue Initiative draws upon the expertise and experience of a unique collection of elder statesmen and women, diplomats, international mediators, journalists, academics and commentators.

If your organization is interested in accessing these facilities please contact the team at info@bbscot.com.
International Law in Action: a lecture and panel discussion on justice and the rule of law.
in association with The Faculty of Advocates and The Bar Human Rights Committee

Monday 22nd August 6pm – 7.45pm
[ Tickets FREE – Location Faculty of Advocates: Mackenzie Lecture Hall ]

The Future of Zimbabwe
A lecture on the Rule of Law in Zimbabwe, and the future of democracy
With Mordecai Mahlangu – Senior Advocate

Mediating Justice in War and Peace
War Crimes and human rights atrocities have been allegedly perpetrated in countries such as Libya, Sri Lanka, Zimbabwe and Palestine. The International Criminal Court has issued a number of writs against leaders such as Gaddafi. When, and in what circumstances, should the UN intervene militarily in countries to save lives? How does the international community balance the need to resolve conflict through negotiation with the demands of justice to prosecute war criminals? Join the debate with a unique panel of experts.

With Sir Kieran Prendergast – former UN diplomat, Marie Colvin – Sunday Times was correspondent, Raja Shehadeh – Palestinian lawyer and writer, Dr. Paikiasothy Savarvanamuttu – Executive Director of the Centre for Policy Alternatives, Sri Lanka, Mordecai Mahlangu – Senior Advocate, Chaired by Mark Muller Stuart QC – Senior Advocate.
A panel discussion on the Arab Spring, held at the Scottish Parliament, on the progress towards democracy for Arabic countries, which for so long have had no democratic voice.
in association with the Festival of Politics

Where next on the Arab Spring?
Saturday 27th August 11 – 12pm
[ Tickets £6 / 3 concessions – Location Main Chamber, Scottish Parliament ]

The Middle East and North African regions are going through dramatic changes but what is next for the Arab Spring and what is the potential impact on the wider world? Is the intervention from the West enough, too little or indeed, welcomed? Libya has seen Western intervention in the bid to save lives but what constitutes to a country receiving intervention?

With Allan Little – BBC’s Special Correspondent, Omar Robert Hamilton – independent film-maker, who during the Cairo revolution used Twitter to communicate images and reaction on the streets, Mark Muller Stuart QC – an international mediator extensively engaged in national dialogue processes relating to the Arab Spring, Ed Ou – photojournalist and World Press Photo winner, who documented the recent revolution in Egypt, Dr. Florence Gaub – Academic Coordinator of the Middle East Faculty at NATO Defense College.
This year’s film programme focuses on four small nations emerging from conflict: Palestine, Kurdish Iraq, Libya and Sri Lanka. In celebrating these cultures, we aim to create a vibrant international platform for cultural exchange and small nation dialogue in Scotland. Each film will be followed by a discussion featuring filmmakers and writers as they take questions from the audience and try to illuminate both the film, and the plight of each nation.

23rd Tuesday

7pm – Raja Shehadeh introduces Luke and John Tchalenko’s
The Writer and The Flautist
(2010 – 30 mins) Total time 1hr
Followed by Q&A session.
A short documentary featuring Palestinian author and human rights lawyer Raja Shehadeh in which the idyllic West Bank landscape is contrasted with the devastating Arab-Israeli ideological divide.

8.45pm – Mark Cousins introduces
The First Movie (2009 – 73 mins)
Followed by a Q&A session.
This magical realist documentary film is set in the village of Goptapa, Kurdish Iraq. Goptapa was targeted by Saddam Hussein’s chemical bombardment in 1988. Mark Cousins showed movies from around the world to the village’s children; then they made their own short films. The results are inspiring. The film has shown around the world.
24th Wednesday

7pm – 21 Years of Revolution
(2009) Total time 1hr
A thematic evening on 21 Years of Revolution focusing on Romania and Libya
A thematic evening on 21 Years of Revolution beginning with Rupert Wolfe Murray’s ‘After the Revolution’ (2009), documenting the street protests that took place in Bucharest in early 1990, capturing a moment of post-revolution anarchy. Mark Muller Stuart QC will then present short films from the 2011 Libyan Revolution, with images from his visit to Benghazi.

An exhibition of revolutionary cartoons from Libya is also on display at the Filmhouse. Please see ART (p16) for more details.

8.45pm – Sri Lanka’s Killing Fields
(2011) Total time 50 minutes
by Callum McCrae
Callum McCrae’s recent Channel 4 documentary, presented by Jon Snow, investigates war crimes that allegedly took place in the final months of Sri Lanka’s 25 year-long civil war in 2009.

Followed by a discussion lead by Gordon Weiss (author of The Cage, The Fight for Sri Lanka) and Dr. Paikiasothy Saravanamuttu from the Centre for Policy Alternatives (Sri Lanka’s foremost civil rights NGO).

Benghazi Speaks
Revolutionary Images from the Libyan Uprising
Sunday 14th August – Sunday 4th September
[ Tickets FREE – Location Edinburgh Filmhouse, EH3 9BZ ]

Dutch photojournalist Teun Voeten has covered conflict in Rwanda, Sierra Leone and Afghanistan. ‘Benghazi Speaks’ is an exhibition born from a recent trip to Libya in Spring 2011; his images capture revolutionary graffiti and cartoons that appeared in their hundreds, adorning city walls and streets. These caricatures illustrate how the Arab Spring of 2011 deployed art in its most powerful and political form, used as a mouthpiece of protest by young men and women willing to risk their lives for an ideal – democracy and freedom.

Voeten said “Benghazi was the first major city to free itself from the Gaddafi regime. With it came new found liberty came an unheard of freedom of expression. Gaddafi – once glorified – was now ridiculed, portrayed a rat caught in a mouse trap, a monkey eating bananas. These works indicate a new existence of profound freedom of expression that will not go away.”
One Foot in Eden
An intimate retrospective of Caroline McNarin
Friday 19th – Wednesday 31st August
Curated by Andrew Brown
[ Tickets £8 – Location Traquair House ]

Scottish Borders artist Caroline McNairn (1955-2010) is considered by many to be the best Scottish painter of her generation. This memorial exhibition is devoted to a selection of her smaller, more intimate paintings, giving a moving insight into the poetic lyricism and humanity of her unique vision, which blends local tradition with an international outlook.

The Enduring Middle East
by Joseph Maxwell Stuart
Saturday 20th – Sunday 21st August
[ Tickets FREE with any event – Location Wine Glass Café, Traquair Grounds ]

This exhibition will be shown in full in 2012.
Sculpture with Hugh Collins
Saturday 20th and Sunday 21st August
[ Tickets FREE with any event – Location Wine Glass Lawn, Traquair Grounds ]

Local sculptor Hugh Collins will carve into a 4ft piece of red cherry wood, on the Wine Glass lawn. Hugh has described his search for “elegance as opposed to perfection”, and he asks adults and children alike to join him in sculpting this piece. “Any way it turns out, that’s how it was meant.”

Sculpture by Tinei Mashaya
Saturday 20th to Saturday 27th August
[ Tickets FREE with any event – Location Traquair Grounds ]

Tinei Mashaya is a talented young sculptor from Zimbabwe. Using the knowledge and skill of his ancestors, he carves vivid and inspired sculptures from the many fine stones found in his native country.
From Tahrir to Traquair

Egyptian singer Ramy Essam went to join the protesters in Tahrir Square in Cairo with his guitar as soon as the January 2011 uprising started. He became ‘the Billy Bragg of Tahrir Square’, performing countless times a day on makeshift stages and living down in the square for the entire revolution. His song ‘Irhal’ (‘Leave’) became the anthem of the revolt and a huge viral hit on the internet.

Ramy Essam will perform on Saturday 20th August at 16.00, at the Vale Club in Innerleithen, in collaboration with The Innerleithen Music Festival

Traquair Fair
Saturday 6th – Sunday 7th August

The 31st Traquair Fair will highlight the best of home grown culture as well as showcasing other small nations throughout the world such as Cuba and Afghanistan.

Including • Music in the Walled Garden Son al Son (sat) / Blazin Fiddles (Sun) • Music on the Up n’ Coming Stage – Spoonthrift / Wind Power

The Greenstone vineyard, situated north of Melbourne, was planted in 2002 by Australian viticulturalist Mark Walpole, Alberto Antonini and David Gleave; Allan Marson is a partner. The aim from the outset was to produce a wine of elegance and balance, and the ten million year old soils of this site are low in vigour, so ideal for the production of our top quality wine.
Beyond Borders is a Scottish cultural initiative dedicated to showcasing the work of writers, intellectuals, artists and filmmakers who come from small nations around the world. Each year, Beyond Borders intends to roll out a number of dialogue events, artistic residencies and writer exchanges both in Scotland and abroad, as well as leadership programmes where cultural and political leaders of other small nations can learn about devolution. We hope that participants in these programmes will draw upon by the unique expertise of Scottish and International Committees, as well as that of our Board of Patrons, all of whom have held high public office either in Parliament, Government, International bodies and the Arts.

If you are interested in supporting the work of Beyond Borders by becoming a Friend or joining our Scottish and International Committees or board of expert advisors please do not hesitate to contact us at info@bbscot.com or visit beyondbordersscotland.com
